

Knox signs to wrestle at Kansas Wesleyan

Louisburg High School graduate Zach Knox (middle) signed his letter of intent on June 30 to wrestle at Kansas Wesleyan University. Sitting next to Zach is LHS head coach Bobby Bovaird (left) and Zach's mother, Shani Knox. Standing is Kansas Wesleyan head coach Jimmy May.

Zach Knox used hard work and relentlessness to propel him from the best junior varsity wrestler to team captain during his four years with the Louisburg High School wrestling program.

Knox plans on using those same two tools to further his wrestling and academic careers.

The 2015 LHS graduate signed his letter of intent on June 30 to wrestle at Kansas Wesleyan University, an NAIA school out of Salina. Knox signed his letter in front of his mother, Shani Knox, teammates, his high school coach Bobby Bovaird and new college coach Jimmy May.

"I am just very excited to have this opportunity," Knox said. "It was back and forth for me at first. I felt like wrestling in college, but at the same time I knew cutting weight all the time would take a lot out of me. In the final decision, I felt wrestling in college would be the best opportunity for me, not only in wrestling, but with my studies and staying on course to what I want to be."

Knox finished his Wildcat career with a 75-58 record and wrestled on the varsity level his final two seasons after being named the Louisburg JV Wrestler of the Year in 2012 and then earned the Workhorse Award in 2013 in his first year on varsity.

He finished with a 21-14 record his senior season and did work in the classroom as well. He was named to the honorable mention all-academic team by the Kansas Wrestling Coaches Association.

"From the very first time I stepped into the Louisburg High School practice room as a coach, he was there," Bovaird said. "He started wrestling as a freshman and he was the only person in the class of 2015 that wrestled all four years for me. I am really excited for him to be able to move on to the next level."

Knox will join a Kansas Wesleyan program that is in its infant stages. It is a new program that is led by coach May and won't begin actual competition until the 2016-17 season.

The year of practice time will allow Knox to work on his conditioning and get used to going up against other collegiate athletes before Kansas Wesleyan's first season. Joining a new program also reminds Knox of something close to home.

"It does bring some excitement to say I will be a part of the original wrestling program down there and it will seem a little bit like Louisburg when I first started with the program," Knox said. "When coach Bovaird showed up, the program was kind of down but showed signs of coming back alive. I want to be a part of great college wrestling program too."

"The campus when I first got there was amazing. It is a small school, but the atmosphere was great and it just seemed like the right fit for me. I am very excited to work with coach May. He has been through a lot of kids and I know he will coach me the way that needs to be coached and make me a better human being."

Kansas Wesleyan isn't the first program May has started. He was first wrestling head coach at Baker University and helped build the program into a national power. In just his third year at Baker, May led the Wildcats to a No. 9 spot in the national rankings and had four all-Americans.

Although May is excited to have Knox on board, the Kansas Wesleyan coach knows wrestling is just a stepping stone to a brighter future.

"I coached high school wrestling for 32 years and it was the best years of my life," May said. "I was able to reach out to young men and become an influence in their lives. Now I am doing it at a little different level, but it is still the same thing and I look forward to working with Zach.

"I would like to congratulate Zach on what he has accomplished. One of the landmarks in life is graduating high school and the next one to graduate college. That is my No. 1 goal, which is to get him through school. If there is nothing else that happens in his life, whether it is related to wrestling or anything else, getting that degree is the most important thing."

Wrestlers take on heavy

Louisburg High School senior Bradley Trageser flips a large tire during the Wildcats' wrestling team camp last week at Louisburg High School. The Wildcat wrestlers spent a day going through a strongman workout.

Coming off its best season in years, the Louisburg wrestling team isn't one to rest on its laurels.

So when the Wildcats got together for their annual team camp last week, they had the mindset to get smarter on the mat, but also to get bigger, faster and stronger. To do that, head coach Bobby Bovaird decided to use one of his camp days to get off the mat and go outside for some unique conditioning.

Bovaird called on friend Corey Scott, a personal trainer in the Kansas City area, to work with his wrestling team through a strongman workout. Whether it was flipping large tires, lifting atlas stones or working on the ropes, all of the wrestlers saw a different way of conditioning.

"It turns out that his strongman lifts are similar in nature to what Coach (Kyle) Littrell has been implementing for the football preseason weights. They're awesome lifts – atlas stones, prowler machines, ropes, tire flipping – that break up the monotony of lifting in the weight room," Bovaird said. "They're total body lifts that are perfect for wrestlers because that's what we do in our sport. So many lifts that the guys do in the weight room are for their 'vanity muscles,' as Corey calls them.

"Corey's lifts are ones that make you a stronger athlete all-around. I think the kids enjoyed the fact that we got outside and did something new. I like some of these lifts enough that I'd like to look into making some purchases so that we can add them into our regular training regimen."

Of course, the Wildcats couldn't spend their entire week of camp flipping tires or lifting large stones – they needed to get better on the mat. Bovaird had good numbers for his advanced camp that met four days last week as 31 signed up and 27 more attended the beginner's camp.

After qualifying five for the state tournament last season, Bovaird wanted to use a different method on working with his high school wrestlers – one that will help his wrestlers remember what they learn at camp and be able to transition that into the first day of practice in November.

He introduced the wrestlers to Strobel Drilling, which was named for former Lehigh University wrestlers coach Greg Strobel.

"Last summer I'd seen some videos of his and I liked how he layered his instruction in different levels," Bovaird said. "I took notes and modified it to a system I plan to use much more frequently next season. I introduce a technique or maneuver, then I allow the kids to get more hands-on with it. There are three levels of application. First, the wrestlers focus on the fine details of a move – the left hand goes here, the right foot steps there, shoulder pressure in this spot, etc. Then, level two involves application where there's more movement based on the technique or there's some slight competition between the wrestler and his partner. Level three involves controlled live wrestling where the move is applied and both wrestlers find themselves in match situations.

"Without daily application of these moves, the wrestlers will forget them quickly, so my main goal was to introduce them to my philosophy; to give them a preview of how things will go next season."

The Wildcats still have a busy summer ahead as they will depart for Valentine, Neb., next week for the Outdoor Challenge Camp for the second straight year. The camp features clinicians from college coaches along with team building activities.

Bovaird also said he has had several wrestlers interested in participating in the Sunflower State Games in Topeka on July 11, while sophomore, and returning state qualifier Ryan Adams is pondering a trip to Dallas to compete for Team Kansas in a big dual tournament later this month.

Adams has also been wrestling in a summer league in Topeka where he went 13-1 and made the all-tournament team for the Top City Summer Wrestling League.

There is excitement within the Louisburg team after its success a year ago. The Wildcats return four of their five state qualifiers and they hope for even more next season as the numbers in the program continue to rise.

However, the road back to state begins with summer workouts.

"There's definitely more enthusiasm from the group," Bovaird said. "During the summer months, I understand that their minds are elsewhere – the pool, football, baseball, summer jobs, etc. – but I'm pretty happy with the variety of kids who've been coming in during open mat sessions. I have a small number of kids who wrestle year-round, which is to be expected considering the limitations of not having a practice facility dedicated to the wrestling program.

"I'm looking into more options to set up off-season wrestling opportunities within Louisburg so that these numbers grow. There's a saying in the wrestling community, 'Summer wrestlers make winter champions.' If you look at our guys who had the most success last season, they all did their fair share of summer wrestling."

Community rallies together for Jimmy and Mya

Jimmy Dolan (left) and Mya Diacono suffered traumatic brain injuries just a month apart due to automobile accidents. It is their stories that have brought the Louisburg community closer together.

Jimmy Dolan and Mya Diacono live in the same community but were worlds apart from each other.

Jimmy, a junior at Louisburg High School, loves to wrestle, hang out with friends and live the life of a teenager.

It was a far cry from 9-year-old Mya who loves soccer, horses and spending time with her fourth-grade friends at Broadmoor Elementary. In a town of less than 5,000 people, the two had never met.

Two tragic accidents changed all of that.

On Jan. 12, Jimmy lost control of his vehicle while driving to school and suffered a major brain injury. Just 42 days later, Mya was involved in an automobile accident just outside the Louisburg city limits that left her with the same severe brain trauma.

Both were rushed to hospitals with life-threatening conditions. Their lives, and the lives of their families, were turned upside down in an instant.

The two families were told the same thing – no brain injury is the same. There was no telling when they would wake up, breathe on their own or what their lives would be like.

The two kids who had never met each other were laying in beds at Children's Mercy Hospital 10 rooms apart – their families holding out hope that one day they would walk out of the hospital.

So, this is the story of Jimmy and Mya – a story of a tragic meeting, a long road to recovery and a community that came together to help two families when they needed it the most.

Jimmy's accident

It was a Monday morning and Maureen Dolan had already started her work day at Vintage Park. The roads were slick that morning and she was a little concerned about her son Jimmy.

Maureen wanted to catch him before he left for school so she tried to call him. There was no answer.

"I just wanted to tell him to be careful," she said.

It was shortly after, a co-worker came in and told Maureen about an accident on old Metcalf Road. She swung her head toward the clock with a brief sense of relief.

Maureen knew Jimmy should have already been at school and that it couldn't have been him. It had to be someone else.

Then her phone rang – Jimmy was hurt.

Jimmy lost control of his vehicle near the intersection of 295th and Metcalf and slid off the road. The driver's side collided with a tree and left him unconscious and fighting for his life.

Workers from the Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. heard the accident and were the first on the scene. Jimmy's truck had caught on fire and workers helped put it out while attending to Jimmy.

Moments later, USD 416 superintendent Dr. Brian Biermann was on his way to drop off his kids at school when he came upon the accident. At that time only a fire truck and the workers from the gas plant were on the scene.

"They weren't letting people through and I heard more sirens coming," Dr. Biermann said. "I could see a truck down in the little ravine but I didn't know who it was, but I did know it was about the time kids are going to school.

"I got out of the car and told my boys to stay put. As I walked down I could hear the people saying 'Stay with us, stay with us.' I knew it wasn't good."

Still not knowing who the victim was, Dr. Biermann asked the sheriff officers on the scene to run the plate hoping it wasn't one of his students. It was Jimmy Dolan.

Maureen arrived at the scene a few minutes later after a call from Dr. Biermann in time to see her son on a stretcher preparing to be Life Flighted.

"I was told when I got there that they didn't think he was going to make it," she reflected.

Jimmy was loaded onto the helicopter and transported to Research Medical Center in Kansas City, Mo., where his fight for survival began.

Jimmy the Fighter

Louisburg High School's Bobby Bovaird had seen Jimmy's fight and determination up close on the wrestling mat and in life.

Just two days earlier, Bovaird, the Wildcat coach, had just watched Jimmy put his best wrestling performance on display at the Louisburg Invitational. He finished fourth at 182 pounds despite losing a tough overtime match.

"He came off the mat, frustrated and angry, and he threw his headgear for the first time I'd ever seen him do that," Bovaird said. "He was upset, and I knew that on that following Monday, we'd have a lot to work on. He wanted to work on it – he wanted to improve. He was driven and perhaps the most driven kid on the team."

Jimmy was willing to do whatever it took to get better at the sport he loved. He didn't have a lot of money to participate in offseason camps or trips with the Wildcat team.

That didn't stop him. He picked up odd jobs here and there, including mowing his coach's lawn to help pay for those camps, including a team trip to Nebraska this past summer.

But when LHS principal Dave Tappan came into Bovaird's room that Jan. 12 morning to tell him the news of Jimmy's accident, Bovaird's heart sank.

Jimmy Dolan had one of his best wrestling performances just two days before his accident.

“The news floored me,” he said. “I couldn’t believe it, even after I heard Life Flight. I can’t describe the feeling, hearing the sound of a helicopter flying overhead, seeing it out the window as it raced through the air, knowing that it was carrying someone you knew.”

Jimmy arrived at Research and doctors immediately began treating him for his physical injuries and he was put on a ventilator. After several tests, it was found that he suffered from a brain shear injury, or more specifically, a diffuse axonal injury.

“The trauma doctor that first saw him said that he had just suffered a severe concussion, he wouldn’t be able to wrestle for the rest of the year but that he would be fine,” Maureen said.

“Then when we got into ICU, the neurologist came in and told us something different after running some tests said there was a shear injury on the brain. His injury was basically the all-over brain injury, it wasn’t just on the frontal lobe. His injury went all the way down to his brain stem."

Doctors told Maureen that Jimmy's outlook wasn't good.

"When he first got there, the doctors weren't sure if he was going to pull through or not," Maureen said. "His brain started to swell and the fluid starting building up. They said if he does pull through they didn't know if he would be able to walk or talk again.

"At first they told us that we should expect to be in ICU for six months because his coma could last that long. I told them, 'I don't think so. You don't know Jimmy Dolan. He is not going to lay around for six months.'"

And he didn't.

Road to Recovery

For almost a month, Jimmy was in a coma, and there wasn't much progress early on. On Jan. 30, he was moved from Research to Children's Mercy Hospital for continued treatment.

It was a lot of waiting and praying for Maureen and the rest of Jimmy's friends and family – including his wrestling family. In the days following the accident, the waiting room was filled with wrestling parents, teammates and coaches to provide support.

Bovaird made several trips to the hospital looking for signs that Jimmy was going to be OK. He, along with Maureen and Jimmy's friends, would sit as his side and talk to him as he rested on the ventilator.

One day, he got the sign he was looking for – a pretty noticeable one.

"His buddies would tease him about giving him a rainbow-colored mohawk, and we thought there was some response from him," Bovaird said. "Maybe it was wishful thinking, or maybe it was there. I joined in with the teasing, talking about his favorite song being something by Taylor Swift. At that point, I was pretty sure I saw the middle finger of his right hand come up.

"Sure enough, his arm raised slightly and the finger extended. If there ever was a time that I would give a kid a free pass on something like that, this was it. Besides, it was a sign I think we all needed, me especially. Jimmy was there. His personality was still there and he was fighting to get back out."

Jimmy currently gets rehab several days a week at Children's Mercy Hospital

As the days wore on, Jimmy continued to make progress. Then on Feb. 11, almost a month after his accident, Jimmy officially awoke from his coma and began to talk.

It was then his recovery started to speed up. Jimmy underwent therapy and his road to recovery was well on its way. He would take his first steps with a walker and eventually use it without the therapist's help.

"He is definitely making steady progress," Maureen said. "I asked him the next day after he woke up what his name was and where he was at and he told me. He just started improving by leaps and bounds.

"The brain reroutes itself and that is why he is able to start talking and walking again. The doctors say it could take time, even years for it get better, but no one really knows how long."

It is a journey Jimmy and Maureen are ready for, thanks in part to the Louisburg community.

Pin the Problem Jimmy

The Dolans experienced many ups and downs through the near month of uncertainty with Jimmy's condition.

However, the one constant was the community of Louisburg – more specifically – the Wildcat wrestling family. From the day Jimmy was admitted to the hospital, Louisburg took over the Research waiting room on a daily basis.

Parents and students alike came by to support Maureen in her time of need, and Jimmy's friends made daily trips to visit their ailing comrade.

"It meant a lot to me," Jimmy said. "It felt really good to see them and have them come visit me. "

Jimmy was in the hospital 67 days between Research and Children's Mercy and during that time parents came to relieve Maureen and offered to stay by Jimmy's side so she could spend some time with her second-grade daughter Jenny.

It certainly didn't stop there.

One of Jimmy's best friends Joseph Hannah was one of several Louisburg residents to make countless trips to visit Jimmy

"I couldn't tell you how many people came up to see Jimmy because there was just so many," Maureen said. "It was amazing. They brought gift cards, they brought support, they brought prayer...they brought so much and it was so wonderful.

"The wrestling family is very tight. They brought lunch and dinner every day for a long time. Louisburg is definitely the best place to live."

Joseph Hannah, one of Jimmy's best friends, and his parents Mark and Courtney Hannah, ordered purple rubber bracelets with ‘Pin the Problem’ written on them. Bovaird created a Facebook page to update everyone on his condition and the team wore Pin the Problem stickers on their head gear toward the end of the season.

The Louisburg Wrestling Club ordered Pin the Problem t-shirts and sold them during the regional tournament in February to raise money for the Dolans. The Louisburg American Legion held a 50/50 raffle to benefit, in which the winner donated most of her winnings back to Jimmy.

Louisburg Ford and LHS Cat-Backers donated the proceeds from their 3-point shot contest, and shortly after the accident, the administration and faculty collected money for the Dolans.

Even the employees at Maureen’s work, Vintage Park, donated their PTO time so that she is able to stay with her family. Dr. Biermann also ordered the bus pick up her daughter Jenny for school, even though she was staying near Drexel, Mo., as buses are not supposed to cross state lines to pick up students.

All the support has meant the world to the Dolans as Jimmy has been able to focus on rehabbing and trying to get back to that normal life he had before that morning in January.

To this day, Jimmy doesn’t remember what happened that fateful day.

“It was just shocking, to hear,” Jimmy said. ‘It’s scary just trying to think about it and I am glad that I don’t remember it.

“I look at life like it’s a big deal now. I am just trying to take things step by step and that is the most important thing right now.”

Jimmy currently has therapy four days a week at Children’s Mercy and is staying at the Ronald McDonald house until he is able to move on to outpatient rehabilitation closer to home.

"I have been making a lot of progress, especially with walking," Jimmy said. "It has been going really good. I even took 900 steps without the walker the other day."

He is also hitting the books as the school has been sending him work to do in hopes he can stay on course to graduate next year.

"We met with them to see what we can do to make sure Jimmy still graduates on time," Dr. Biermann said. "That is what Jimmy wants, that is what we want and his mom definitely wants that. I fully expect him to walk across that stage without his walker and get his diploma. He is doing some work up there with some education things and the plan is to transition him back a couple Fridays here later this month or early May.

"To where I saw Jimmy from the truck, from his stay at Research to now has just been unbelievable. God is good."

On Mar. 24, Jimmy reunited with his wrestling family during the team's banquet. For the first time since the accident, he walked through the halls of Louisburg High School.

"It was difficult to keep my composure when I saw Jimmy walking down the hallway when he came to the banquet," Bovaird said. "To hear him talking was one thing, but to see him walking – using only the walker for assistance – here in his own school was something that was just amazing to see."

Even though doctors gave Jimmy little hope in the beginning, he overcame the odds. Now Jimmy is the one giving hope – hope to a family that is in desperate need of it.

The afternoon of Feb. 24 was just like many others. Kids rushed out of Broadmoor Elementary as another day of school was done and little Mya Diacono caught a ride with family friend Jill Crane and her two daughters.

As the Cranes ventured on Kansas Highway 68 just outside the Louisburg city limits, Jill slowed to make the turn into Mya's home. Tragedy struck as a semi failed to slow down and hit her vehicle from behind.

Emergency vehicles rushed to the scene and Jill and her two daughters were taken to Miami County Medical Center. Unfortunately, Mya's injuries were more serious.

Mya suffered severe head trauma and had to be Life Flighted to Children's Mercy. The injuries left her in a coma and she had to be put on a ventilator.

Doctors informed Mya's parents, Spencer and Amber Gardner, that there is no way to know when she would wake up and what her life would be like if she did.

Mya Diacono

The Gardners had a feeling of hopelessness and the waiting was getting tiresome like it would for any parent in that situation. However, just 10 rooms away from Mya's, laid a little bit of hope.

First Baptist Church pastor Dan Rhodes came by Children's Mercy, recognized Spencer and asked about Mya. Then he told Spencer, "I have someone for you to meet."

Rhodes took the Gardners to see Jimmy Dolan. By that time, Jimmy was on his way to recovery. He was talking and started to regain some movement.

Although it was a bit of shock to both Amber and Spencer, hope started to come back.

"When I first saw him they were lifting him up out of bed and putting him in his wheelchair because he told them he had to go to the bathroom and they were all excited," Spencer said. "That is when it hit me like a ton of bricks – this is going to be our future.

"But if you are going to compare our 9-year-old daughter to something, why not compare her to the strength of a wrestler. Jimmy told people when he woke up that he was going to walk again and he has done really well. It is good for us to see someone succeeding that has been through this and come out the other side."

Amber and Spencer continued to monitor Jimmy's progress and became friends with Maureen. The three stayed at the Ronald McDonald House when they weren't by their child's side.

"Jimmy's mom is so strong and it is nice to have someone there come by and say that (Mya) is doing great and she is going down the right path and that it is only going to get better," Spencer said.

Support for Mya

Four years ago, Mya was a kindergartner in Overland Park but Amber and Spencer had talked about moving to a smaller town to raise their children.

Spencer, who is a Louisburg High School graduate, grew up in Louisburg and wanted to bring his children up in the same type of environment.

"It was a great community for me to grow up in," he said. "I went to a school where I knew everyone in my class. I got to wrestle and play golf and I wasn't good at either of them. I couldn't have asked for a better place to grow up.

"I left for a while and I always had this idea that I wanted my kids to grow up in the same small town. I didn't expect to come back and have the same closeness I had when I was a kid. The sense of community is still very much alive and well here."

Amber, on the other hand, wasn't quite as sure. She didn't want Mya to have to start over again and make new friends.

As it turned out, that really wasn't a problem for Mya.

"I worried that it was a small town and that she might not be accepted and I had all these what ifs," Amber said. "But she has come here and made so many friends. I wouldn't change our decision for anything because it has been great for Mya and our family."

Amber and Spencer found out just how good the town was at one of the most disheartening times of their life. As they were struggling to cope with Mya's condition, Amber got a visit from a complete stranger – Jenny Diederich.

She approached Amber about doing a fundraiser for Mya and the gesture caught her a little off-guard.

me was a big part of the Kids Helping Kids fundraiser to help Mya family

“(Jenny) didn’t even know us and said I am going to do this for you guys,” “I mean, who does this? We were just blown away with what she did.”

Diederich put on the Kids Helping Kids fundraiser at Louisburg High School that featured a bubble soccer game and a custom cake auction. Several community members donated cakes and Bubble Soccer Kansas brought inflatables as faculty and staff from Broadmoor Elementary took on each other.

Steve Hamilton with Chris Cakes fed the crowd while LHS band director John Cisetti brought his LHS Jazz Band to play at the event. The fundraiser was to help benefit not only Mya, but the Crane family as well.

As Amber arrived at the high school, she couldn't believe her eyes.

"I expected maybe 50 people and I was grateful for that," Amber said "When we pulled up to park, just seeing all the cars and then walking in the door and seeing a line of people...I just started to cry. There are good people in this world and I am just overwhelmed with all the support."

It got even more emotional later in the evening when Jill Crane, one of Amber's best friends, donated her half of the money to Mya. However, that isn't a gift Amber is going to accept just yet.

"Jill is my good friend and her daughter is Mya's best friend," Amber said. "She doesn't feel worthy because her daughters weren't injured critically. It is hard on everyone though. We are still arguing about that. Money is not going to change it. They still had injuries too."

The night was something the Gardner's needed. They saw everyone who cared for Mya and it lifted their spirits, even if it was for a few hours.

Jimmy and Mya

As the days wore on, Jimmy made good on his promise to his family and he learned to walk with the assistance of a walker.

Jimmy's recovery was moving along at a rapid rate, but Mya's wasn't moving along quite as fast. There was signs of progress, however.

Mya's physical injuries have healed and she is no longer on the ventilator – a big obstacle for her recovery.

"I work for the railroad, so I was gone for a little bit, but the improvements she has made have been more dramatic for me because I wasn't there every day," Spencer said. "We have our milestones and our big thing was we wanted to breathe on her own and she is passed that. We are in the rehab stages now and she is using a lot more muscles than she was before."

Mya even gave her mom a glimpse of her old self.

Mya and her mom Amber Gardner

"She smiled for the first time late one night," Amber said. "I didn't realize she could hear me because I was making jokes about our family and a little smile came out and you could hear a little chuckle. I was like 'Did anyone just see that?'"

"Her body is healed and now we are just focusing on the brain. She went from no head control to some head control and that is one of our milestones. We know she has a long way to go. She is not eating on her own, she isn't walking but she is on full assist. From the beginning to right now we feel like we have seen a lot of progress."

The Gardners also saw progress wandering the halls of Children's Mercy as Jimmy would make visits to Mya's room, checking in on her.

"He comes by to see Mya every so often and they have even gone to therapy together," Amber said. "He even made a card for her one time and dropped it by. It was really neat to see that."

Jimmy was eventually released from Children's Mercy and moved into the Ronald McDonald House with his mom, while still doing therapy. It is there Jimmy still stays in touch with the Gardners.

"You form a connection," Amber said. "I sat with him with our boys a few days ago and he has improved so much. When I first saw him he wasn't eating on his own and now he is eating fried chicken. That is amazing."

Every time the Gardners look at Jimmy they see a hope – a hope that one day Mya will be the one roaming the hospital hallways, eating on her own and talking with them again.

They are patiently waiting for their precious "Baby Cakes" to wake up.

LHS wrestling hands out postseason honors

Brenton Wrigley shakes hands with head coach Bobby Bovaird upon receiving the Wrestler of the Year award Tuesday during the team's postseason banquet at Louisburg High School.

Their season might have ended on the state wrestling mats in Salina, but members of the Louisburg wrestling team got a chance to reflect on what was a positive season for the Wildcats.

During Tuesday's end of the season banquet, coach Bobby Bovaird talked about a season in which the Wildcats ended a two-year drought and qualified five for the state tournament. Brenton Wrigley, Anders Vance, Mason Koechner, Ryan Adams and Nathan Keegan all made their first trip to state.

The Wildcats also had four wrestlers who had won at least 30 matches and six program records fell. As a team, Louisburg finished in the top three at five tournaments and had a 12-5 dual record.

"The last few years have been humbling," Bovaird said during the banquet. "But I knew that with patience, dedication and hard work we would be able to bring Louisburg back to the point where we are a competitive program. And here we are."

The Louisburg High School wrestling team gathers together for one final picture after their postseason banquet Tuesday.

Two Wildcats also were recognized for their work in the classroom. Seniors Wrigley and Zach Knox were each awarded honorable mention Academic All-State by the Kansas Wrestling Coaches Association.

Wildcats come up short of medals

Louisburg freshman Ryan Adams battles Frontenac's Brandon Miekus during a 138-pound match Saturday at the Class 4A Kansas State Wrestling Championships in Salina. Adams went 2-2 on the day and finished a win short of a medal.

SALINA – As a freshman, Ryan Adams set a pretty high goal for himself.

Adams wanted to be a four-time state medalist and eventually a state champion for the Wildcats. One of those dreams is still alive, while the other was dashed Saturday during the Class 4A Kansas State Wrestling Championships.

The Louisburg 138-pounder came up one win short of a medal when he was pinned by Holton's Tyler Price in the first period of the consolation quarterfinals. Adams finished the tournament at 2-2.

"We talked about what it means that he fell short of one of his goals," Louisburg coach Bobby Bovaird said. "I told him that falling short of one goal should make him all that much more motivated to pursue the other goals. Now that he can't be a 4-time placer, he's got more motivation to pursue his goal of being a state champion. He's a talented kid."

Adams wasn't the only Wildcat to end his season with a loss. Anders Vance (285), Mason Koechner (220), Brenton Wrigley (195) and Nathan Keegan (113) also came up short of a state medal at the Salina Bicentennial Center.

All four wrestlers ended their state runs with a 1-2 record, and even though they didn't reach the medal stand, winning a state tournament match meant something to them and their coach.

"It was such an exciting weekend," Bovaird said. "I'm so proud of the fact that not only did five wrestlers make it to state, but all five went down there to compete for a medal. They all gave 100 percent in their matches. Each guy won at least one match. Technically, that put each of them in the top-12 of their weight classes. However, I had a sinking feeling in my stomach after it was all over.

"The last two years, I'd felt so low after not qualifying anyone for state. That was a solid blow to my ego as a coach. This year, I was pretty happy to take five kids to state, and I was so proud that they all won at least one match at state. When it was done, it hit me that this was the first time as a competitor or coach that I'd been at the state tournament and left without a state placer. I didn't like that feeling, and I'm disappointed. The good thing is that I have reason to be disappointed. The boys are such great kids to be around, and they're very talented and hard-working. I'm not disappointed in them – I'm disappointed for them. I know they can do great things, and I just wanted the best for them. Next season will be something different. I love how these guys are feeling motivated already, and I'm feeling that motivation, too."

Adams opened his state tournament run Friday against Wamego's Dalton Carley, an eventual state medalist. Carley, who beat Adams earlier in the year, had a little more difficult time as he eventually beat Adams by a 4-2 decision.

Later on in the day, Adams beat Tonganoxie's Garrett Martin by an 8-0 major decision after losing to Martin earlier in the year. He then followed it up with another revenge win Saturday when he pinned Frontenac's Brandon Miekus, who he lost two in the final seconds of the regional semifinals.

Adams finished the year with a 37-12 record, many of which came thanks to wrestlers who made it far in the state tournament.

"When we were watching the 138-pound state semifinals, we figured out that with the four wrestlers on the mat, they accounted for 8 of his 12 losses, including three to Baldwin's Thomas Lisher, who was the eventual state champion," Bovaird said. "Even though Ryan fell short of his goal, he definitely gave it everything he had. With all the time he dedicates to wrestling in the offseason, he's definitely on the right track to be our next state champion, and because he's a great team member, I expect his passion to rub off on his teammates."

Louisburg heavyweight Anders Vance works for position on Towanda-Circle's Austin King on Saturday at the state tournament in Salina. Vance finished his season with a 27-9 record

The tournament got off to a rough and controversial start for Vance, who lost his opening round match to Ulysses' Austin Ochoa in a 7-6 decision in overtime. The match was tied at 6-all but Vance had Ochoa in a headlock, but it slipped and was called for an illegal hold, giving Ochoa a point and the match.

Vance rebounded to pin Jefferson West's Michael Majors in the first period Friday before falling to Towanda Circle's Austin King by decision in his first match Saturday.

"I wasn't happy with how the officials called his first match Friday, but then again I've always told the team to do everything they can to keep the match result out of the hands of the officials," Bovaird said. "Anders had a much better second match, but in his third, I think that he just hit an obstacle he couldn't overcome. His opponent, a kid from Circle, had been a state qualifier the year before, and I think that experience gave him an advantage over Anders. Next year, however, Anders is going to be able to take his experience from this season, plus his confidence, and use it to push him through any obstacle in the way as he tries to win state."

Louisburg senior Brenton Wrigley ties to hold down Rock Creek's Colton Hill on Saturday in Salina. Wrigley lost the match by a 4-2 decision and ended his Wildcat career with a 35-9 record.

Wrigley, a senior, was able to get his first ever state victory when he opened the tournament Friday with a 7-3 victory in overtime over Hugoton's Noel Camacho. In the quarterfinals, Wrigley fell in a close 7-4 decision to Chapman's Jacob Stoneberger, before falling again in the consolation round Saturday by a 4-2 decision to Rock Creek's Colton Hill.

The loss ended his season and Wildcat career with a 35-9 record.

"It was definitely bittersweet," BovaIRD said. "He's been such a strong leader for the team. His sophomore and junior seasons, he had some setbacks with minor injuries and he couldn't build up the confidence that he should have had. This year, after having a great week at the Nebraska Outdoor Challenge Camp and a solid football season, he walked onto the mat with all sorts of confidence. He won three tournaments (Tonganoxie, Topeka, and League), had 35 wins, and beat state-ranked kids throughout the season. I'm very proud of his growth, although I wish the season had ended differently."

Louisburg's Nathan Keegan stops a shot from Chanute's Gage Leedy during a 113-pound match Saturday at the state tournament in Salina. Keegan ended his season with a 30-19 record

Keegan and Koechner both sophomores, also picked up their first state victories. Both wrestlers lost their first match, before rebounding to win their next.

Keegan, after losing to Tonganoxie Patterson Starcher in overtime Friday, came back with a pin of Clearwater's Jake Thomas in the consolation round. He was eventually pinned by Chanute's Gage Leedy in the third round of his next match.

Sophomore Mason Koechner battles Smoky Valley's Jarod DeMott Saturday in Salina. Koechner was 1-2 at the state tournament at 220 pounds and finished the year with a team-high 39 wins.

As for Koechner, he fell to Colby's Austin Hart, the eventual state champion in the first round. He responded with a pin of Holton's Nathan Shields in his next match Friday.

On Saturday, however, Koechner's season came to an end when he fell 10-4 to fourth-place finisher Jarod DeMott from Smoky Valley.

"We made the trip to state, and simply qualifying wasn't good enough for the guys who went," Bovaird said. "They wanted to win matches and bring home medals. Next year, we're not just gunning to send people to state; we're gunning to bring home medals and to get Louisburg to the top of Kansas Class 4A."

Wildcats gear up for state run

Mason Koechner is one of five Louisburg wrestlers to make an appearance at the Class 4A Kansas State Wrestling Championships beginning Friday at the Salina Bicentennial Center.

It could be easy for the five state qualifiers on the Louisburg High School wrestling team to look back and be satisfied with the season they've had.

All five are first-time state qualifiers, and for some people, that would be enough. Louisburg also hasn't qualified anyone for state since 2012 so the season could already be considered a success.

That is far from the attitude the Wildcats will take to the mat Friday when the Class 4A state tournament begins at the Salina Bicentennial Center. They want to make sure they come home with some hardware.

"This team is ready to go," Louisburg coach Bobby Bovaird said. "We talked about the boys' strengths and why they should go to Salina expecting to win matches and bring home medals. It's not a matter of 'I hope' or 'I wish'; instead, it's a matter of being confident and believing in their own abilities.

"I'm excited for state, more excited than I've ever been. Maybe it's because this state team has been three years in the making. We're competitive, and we're talented. Once these guys fully understand that, they can make a huge impact at state."

The tournament, which is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. on Friday, won't be easy for any of the five Wildcats. Even for regional champion Anders Vance, the road is a difficult one.

Vance (26-7) will square off with Ulysses' Austin Ochoa (20-14) in the first round, and if he advances, will set up a possible revenge match with Wamego's Kasey Feyh (31-2), who he lost to a month ago at Baldwin.

"Anders will have a tough first match against a western Kansas kid," Bovaird said. "Western Kansas has always had a reputation for tough kids, but the advantage is that we know nothing about them and they know nothing about us."

"In the second round, Anders may have a rematch with a Wamego kid who beat him at Baldwin. The best place to have a revenge victory is at state. That would put him in the semifinals, guaranteeing him a top-6 finish."

Senior Brenton Wrigley (34-7) will begin his journey to a possible state medal at 195 pounds when he faces Hugoton's Noel Camancho (20-14) in the first round. Sophomore 113-pounder Nathan Keegan (29-17) will meet Tonganoxie's Patterson Starcher (31-12) in the opening round.

Freshman Ryan Adams (35-10) will have a tough first round matchup when he faces off with senior Dalton Carley (33-4) from Wamego at 138 pounds. Sophomore Mason Koechner (38-12) might have the toughest first round opponent of all as he meets Colby's Austin Hart (34-5) at 220 pounds. Hart is also a regional champion.

"This is the first trip for all five wrestlers, but we've been stressing to them all week that we're not just making the trip to Salina for fun," Bovaird said. "We're going there to win some medals. Every one of our guys has a chance to win matches, and if they apply themselves and get focused, they can upset some ranked kids. We've got the ability to bring home two or three medals.

"Ryan Adams and Mason Koechner have been to kids state before, and they've competed on the national level. Anders Vance and Brenton Wrigley are upperclassmen and have the advantage of maturity. Nathan Keegan is making his first trip, but he's a kid who's confident with his abilities."

The top six in each weight class will earn a medal. The tournament will continue at 9 a.m. on Saturday with several consolation rounds before ending with the finals.

Vance wins regional, Wildcats qualify five for state

Louisburg junior Anders Vance works to pin Spring Hill's Sam Christy on Saturday at the Class 4A regional wrestling tournament in Louisburg. Vance won the regional crown at 285 pounds and was one of five Wildcats to qualify for state

The first time Anders Vance took to the wrestling mat was in the eighth grade.

Ironically, that was the last time the Louisburg High School wrestling team qualified anyone for the state tournament, which was in 2012. It was only fitting that Vance, a junior, was the one who broke the two-year drought.

On Friday, Vance became the first Wildcat to qualify for the Class 4A state tournament during the regional tournament in Louisburg since 2012. The Louisburg heavyweight won his semifinal match and eventually became regional champion after he pinned Spring Hill's Sam Christy in just 53 seconds in the championship match.

"To be honest, I really wasn't expecting this," Vance said. "I came in thinking that I would do all right, but I really didn't come in thinking I was going to win regionals. I am definitely happy with the way it turned out."

The good news didn't stop there, however, as the Wildcats qualified four more for the state tournament and by the time Saturday was over Louisburg sat in fourth-place in the team standings. Not too bad for a team that had a rough couple of years.

Senior Brenton Wrigley (195 pounds), sophomores Mason Koechner (220) and Nathan Keegan (113), along with freshman Ryan Adams (138) will all make the trip to Salina this Friday in hopes for a state medal. The top four in each weight class earned spots at state.

"To qualify five kids was an attainable goal," Louisburg coach Bobby Bovaird said. "Earlier in the season, I wasn't sure how we would end up, but as we neared the post season, the coaching staff saw a huge shift in the mindsets of our guys. We saw a level of competitiveness that hadn't been there before.

"We're all very excited after this weekend. It's not just a relief after having been shut out the last two seasons. It's an excitement due to the fact that our guys who have qualified can compete with the top tier of wrestlers in the state. We're not just going to be looking to make a trip to Salina; we're going to be looking to win some medals."

The Wildcats displayed some competitive fire throughout the tournament and Vance was front and center. He opened the tournament with a 29 second pin of Iola's Colton Toney and then advanced to the semifinals where he defeated Paola's Jaymes Carter in a 3-1 decision.

Vance (26-7) then faced off with Christy, who he had lost to a week earlier at the Frontier League meet, and was able to get some revenge with his quick pin.

"You know, I am just really excited that we were able to get five guys to state," Vance said. "We haven't had that many qualify at one time in a while and it is pretty cool to be able to be a part of that."

Just like Vance, Wrigley is in his third year with the program and was able to qualify as a senior, which made the moment a little more special for him.

Louisburg senior Brenton Wrigley celebrates his victory in the consolation semifinals Saturday during the Class 4A regional tournament at Louisburg High School.

Wrigley, who is ranked No. 5 in Class 4A at 195 pounds, reached the semifinals after a major decision over Ottawa's Garrett Gross. In the semis, however, Wrigley (34-7) got caught by Chanute's Alex Son for a first period pin.

He came through the back side of the bracket with a 3-1 decision over Paola's Jake Miller to earn a spot at state and then finished it off with a 5-1 decision over Frontenac's Kylan Dixon to take third overall.

"To qualify for state my senior year is great," Wrigley said. "I came into the season expecting to qualify for state and now it is here. I am not satisfied though. I still want a state medal and that is what I am going to try and get."

Keegan had to travel a different road than some of the others as he was on the junior varsity a year ago and wasn't even the team's 113-pounder on varsity to start the year. But due to an injury early in the year, he took the spot and never looked back.

Louisburg sophomore Nathan Keegan works for a pin Saturday in the consolation semifinals.

He started the tournament with a pin in the quarterfinals before losing a tough 6-4 decision to Independence's Carl Jesse. Keegan (29-17) rebounded to pin Osawatomie's Kitana Diediker in the first period to earn a spot at state and then went on to take third after he pinned Columbus' Nate Thomas in 4 minutes and 13 seconds.

"Nathan has been surging with confidence all season," Bovaird said. "He spent most of last season at JV behind David Bindi, and this year he started at a weight where he didn't have to do much weight-cutting. When David's season was ended by a second concussion, Nathan jumped on the chance to move down to 113. He's been pretty dominant there ever since."

Although he may be just a freshman, Adams has plenty of experience behind him as he has wrestled in the kids' club for several years. He used that tournament experience to earn a third-place finish.

Adams (35-10) nearly found himself in the championship match, but lost a 12-11 decision to Frontenac's Brandon Miekus in a match that went back and forth. Instead of sulking, he rebounded to beat Columbus' Zach Porter in a 7-4 decision in the consolation semis and then pinned Fort Scott's Zarek Fewell in the second period.

Louisburg freshman Ryan Adams qualified for state at 138 pounds and was one of five Wildcats to advance to state this weekend in Salina.

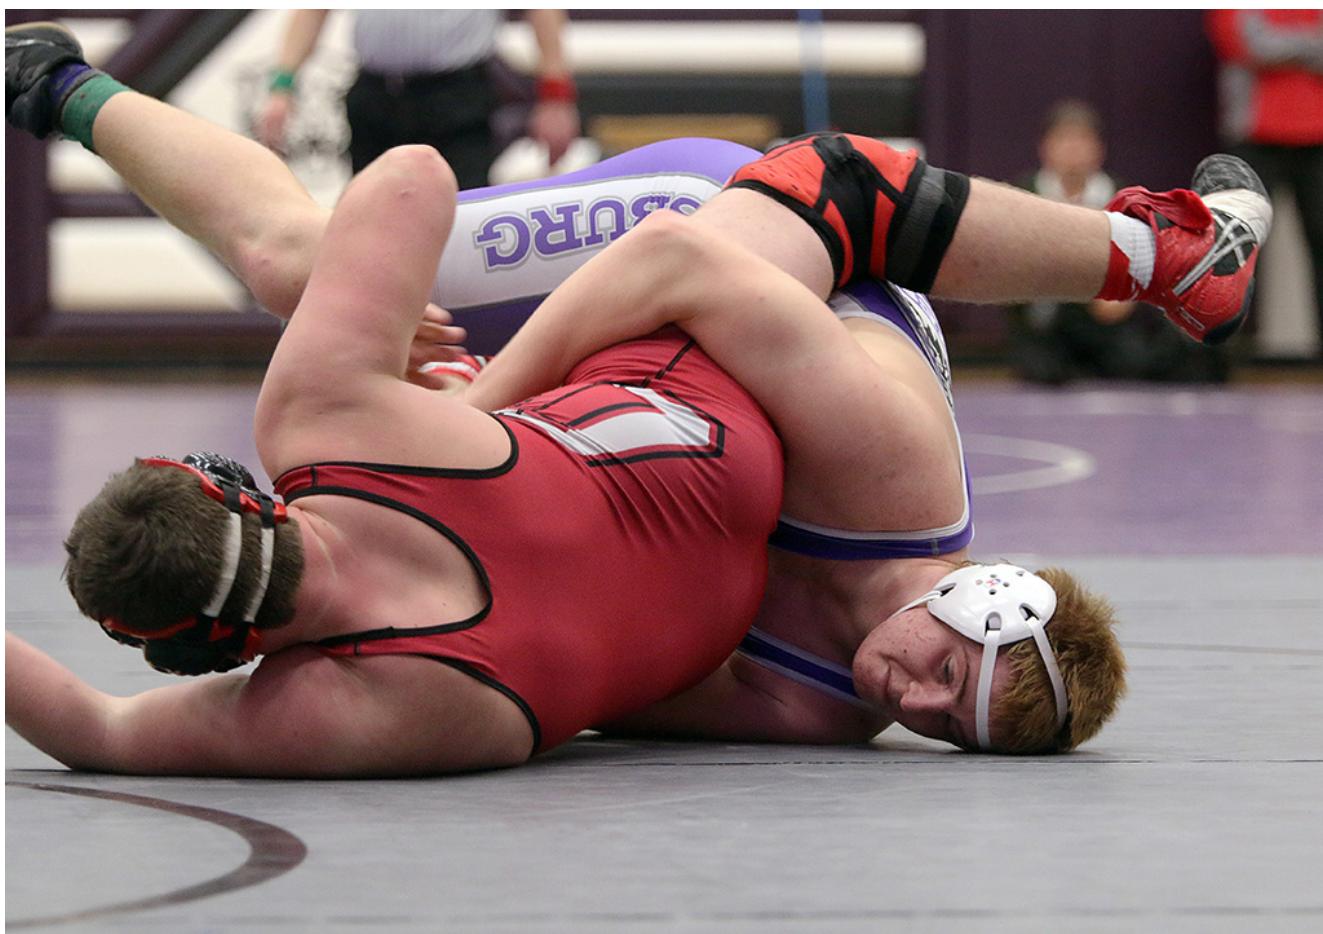

"I really wasn't nervous at all," Adams said. "That semifinal match was a little frustrating because I had beaten (Miekus) in kids club before and I didn't wrestle as well as I should have.

"I am still excited about qualifying for state and I think we are really coming together as a team right now and I am happy to be a part of it."

According to Bovaird, it appears Adams can even tell the future.

"With Ryan, I'm very happy with how he's come along," Bovaird said. "After he won the match to qualify for state, he gave me a big hug and reminded me of a promise he'd made a year ago – he'd be a state qualifier for the Wildcats."

Looking at just the wins, it wasn't surprising Koechner will make the trip to state. At 220 pounds, he currently has a record of 38-12, which leads the team, but had a tough road.

Mason Koechner, a Louisburg sophomore, pinned his way to state with four victories over the two-day tournament, all by pin.

Koechner took the challenge head on as he recorded all four of his wins in the tournament by pin, including a pin of Chanute's Gage Clark in the consolation semifinals to secure his state bid. The Louisburg sophomore wrestled six matches in two days, the most on the team and eventually finished fourth after falling to Paola's Dunkan Watrous in the third-place match.

"The one thing about it was there was no easy match or round," Koechner said. "Every match was tough and there was some good competition. It feels good to make the trip to state and I know it is only going to get harder."

Louisburg nearly got two more to state, but sophomore Lyndon Smith (182) and freshman Tucker Batten (126) each fell in the consolation semifinals to end their season.

Smith battled in the back side of the bracket as he found himself down big in two matches Saturday, only to fight back and pin both opponents to reach the consolation semis.

"Lyndon showed that he is a dangerous wrestler," Bovaird said. "In two of his matches Saturday, he was losing to wrestlers who were more experienced, but he kept battling and caught and pinned both of them. We thought he'd have a good shot at upsetting his last opponent and making it into state. You never know – weird things happen in February. Lyndon came close to making it happen. He came off the mat after his last loss with a smile on his face. He knew he'd given it his best shot, that he'd gone further than anyone would have expected him to go.

"I've been able to work with Tucker since his seventh-grade year, and I've always known he is a talented wrestler. He won three matches at the regional tournament, and he's been a freshman stuck in a tough weight class all season. He's taken his lumps, but he's also come pretty far. I'm excited to see what he can accomplish the next three years now that he's got a year experience under his belt."

On what was a day for celebration, the Wildcats had to say goodbye to senior Zach Knox, who finished with a 21-14 record at 132 pounds after losing his first consolation match Saturday.

"His loss was the toughest to handle. Zach is a kid who started as a freshman and really caught on to the sport. As a freshman, he got a good amount of experience on varsity, but was stuck behind Cullen Hood, Austin Hood, and Austen Scott," Bovaird said. "Then, as a sophomore and junior, he really made huge strides forward. Over the years, he's got his name in our record books for the Top 5 in several season and career records.

"He was a captain this year, won the Topeka tournament, and was seeded in a good spot to qualify. When he got eliminated from the tournament, it really broke my heart for him. We both shed a lot of tears out in the hallways after that. I'm very proud of what he's done in high school sports, and I'm really thankful for him being a part of the program. He's the only member of the class of 2015 who stayed with wrestling all four years."

Wildcats gear up to host regional tourney

For some wrestlers, this weekend's Class 4A regional tournament will mark the end of the season.

As for Louisburg, it hopes it will have several wrestlers compete a week longer. Louisburg will host the regional tournament beginning at 3 p.m. today and will continue at 11 a.m. Saturday.

Sixteen teams will compete at the two-day tournament in which the top four in each weight class will qualify for next weekend's state tournament in Salina.

"We are very excited," Louisburg coach Bobby Bovaird said. "This is my first being involved in hosting a regional tournament, and I think it's been a long time since we've ever hosted, if we've ever hosted one at all. The team is excited to have this tournament in our home gym. We'll have a home crowd, lots of fans and family members here to cheer us on."

After not qualifying anyone for the state tournament the last two seasons, the Wildcats are primed to break that streak this year and have a chance to send several. Regional seedings were recently announced and Louisburg has seven wrestlers seeded in the top 6.

Louisburg senior Brenton Wrigley, who is currently the No. 5-ranked wrestler in the state at 195 pounds, is the No. 1 seed in his weight class. Junior heavyweight Anders Vance is the No. 2 seed at 285 pounds.

Nathan Keegan (No. 3, 113 pounds), Ryan Adams (No. 3, 138), Mason Koechner (No. 4, 220), Thad Hendrix (No. 5, 106), Zach Knox (No. 5, 132) and Lyndon Smith (No. 6, 182) all have put themselves in position to qualify if they wrestle well.

"I'm excited for the kids," Bovaird said. "They've been working so hard for this. After all we've had to overcome this season, I want nothing more than for their hard work to pay off. We've been talking about mindsets the last few weeks. There are three principles we've been focusing on: we don't care who we wrestle, we can beat anyone and there's nowhere else we'd rather be than right here and right now. This is the fun and exciting time of the season. All the guys need to do now is step on the mat, pull the trigger, and do the things they know how to do on the mat."

The regional will be a very competitive one, however. Teams making the journey to Louisburg are: Labette County, Chanute, Coffeyville-Field Kindley, Columbus, Fort Scott, Frontenac, Anderson County, Independence, Iola, Prairie View, Osawatomie, Ottawa, Paola, Parsons and Spring Hill.

Three of those teams are also ranked in the top 10, including No. 1 Chanute, No. 3 Prairie View and No. 10 Osawatomie, along with numerous state-ranked wrestlers.

"Independence has several ranked wrestlers, along with Spring Hill and Columbus," Bovaird said. "It's a tough regional, all right. Regionals in Class 4A are always very tough. Each year, we see kids not qualify when they had been ranked all year, they were qualifiers last year, or even state placers last year."

The order of events has been set for today and will proceed as follows: first round, quarterfinals, consolation round one and then championship semifinals. The rest of the tournament will resume tomorrow morning.

Louisburg Sports Zone will also be in attendance taking pictures of all 16 teams. For those interested in purchasing photos, they will be available at louisburgsportszone.smugmug.com a few days following the tournament.

Wrigley wins league crown at

195 pounds

Louisburg senior Brenton Wrigley won the 195-pound weight class Saturday at the Frontier League Dual Tournament in Eudora. Wrigley is now the No. 5 ranked wrestler in Class 4A in his weight class.

EUDORA – Brenton Wrigley is trying to end his Louisburg wrestling career on a good note and he is already well on his way to doing that.

In his first, of what Wrigley hopes to be his final three tournaments, he stood on top of the medal stand. Wrigley, a senior, won the 195-pound title Saturday at the Frontier League Dual Tournament in Eudora.

Wrigley was one of four Wildcat wrestlers to earn spots in the top two. In the process, he and the rest of the Louisburg team put together a strong showing of their own as the Wildcats finished third with a record of 4-2.

Louisburg couldn't have asked for a better start to the tournament. The Wildcats opened with victories over Ottawa (40-31) and Spring Hill (42-40) on Friday and then followed it up with wins over De Soto (54-25) and Eudora (54-27).

The schedule quickly got more difficult as Louisburg faced off with the state's No. 2 ranked team Baldwin next and fell 51-27. Baldwin rolled to the league championship with a 6-0 mark.

Next up was rival Paola and the Wildcats came up just short in a 41-30 loss. Louisburg trailed just 32-30 heading into the 220-pound match, but suffered a close loss at 220 and was open at 285.

Wrigley posted a 6-0 record, but three of those wins were big and all came Saturday. Wrigley upset De Soto's Jeremy Slitor with a pin in the second period. Slitor was previously the No. 5 ranked wrestler in Class 4A.

Baldwin's Gunther Wehrman was next and Wrigley held on for a 5-4 decision before edging out Paola's Jake Miller for a 3-1 decision in overtime.

After his performance, Wrigley is now ranked No. 5 in Class 4A at 195 pounds by the Kansas Wrestling Coaches Association.

The Wildcats also got good tournaments from Nathan Keegan (113 pounds), Tucker Batten (126) and Ryan Adams (138) who finished second in the league with just one loss each. Zack Knox (132), Lyndon Smith (182) and Mason Koechner (220) each finished in third place.

All four of Keegan's wins came by pin and three of those were under a minute. His lone loss came thanks to Eudora's Elijah Kennedy, the eventual champion and Keegan was pinned in the third round.

Three of Batten's victories were also by pin and all three were under two minutes, while Adams, a freshman, recorded four pins on his way to a 5-1 day.

Louisburg will host the 16-team regional tournament beginning at 3 p.m. this Friday and will continue at 11 a.m. on Saturday. The top four in each weight class will qualify for the state tournament.
